

C.L. Johnson Store on Railroad Street
Lucille White's Father's Store
Condensed from Lucille White's Oral History

Yes, he (my father) ran a General Store. He sold groceries, shoes, fabrics and notions. It was right next door to where she was born. She was born on the south side of the store.

Yes, we had a two-room house that was attached to the store. And then when I was six my father built a house north of the store and we moved into that and had lot's of room. The store was on Railroad Street across from the depot It was at 2005 North Railroad Street.
